A weary traveler curses
and offers his cane, his cloak, and the sandals from his feet just for the sight of a hostelry where he may come in out of the rain to rest his blistered feet and let his body drink the nectar of sleep.

He falls to his knees
and cries out in the darkness, lost, forsaken, and alone.

Oh traveler, despair not!
You have journeyed long and far and need comforting.
Come to me and rest your weary body.
Lay your head upon my bosom, and forget your troubles and woes.
No more shall you be lost;
No more shall you wander aimlessly.
I will show you the road to truth and immortality.
Come, and I will be your guide.

To a really sweet, really nice & really swingin' kid.

In past years, the Mirror has been dedicated to many teachers for their fine human qualities, their unselfish sacrifice, and their never ceasing devotion. But one man has remained constantly in the background though he may have been the most deserving of this honor. For the past seven years, he has brightened our life at Montour with the richness of art. And ironically while contributing inestimably to the Mirror as its advisor he has never received this recognition that he has merited. So it is now with great distinction that we dedicate to you, Mr. Carl Palka, the 1973 Montour Mirror.

The mentor took his pupil
And directed him to a seat
So that he may sit and learn
And listen to the words of wisdom in patient contemplation,
As Socrates to Plato, Plato to Aristotle, And Aristotle to Alexander.

to teach
to indoctrinate, to inculcate, to counsel to enlighten, to edify, to impregnate, to promulgate, to propagate, to disseminate, to manifest, to reveal, to perceive,
to discern, to discover, to acquire,
to solve, to learn
to teach is to learn.

why . . . ?
 it does not matter other than
 'twas done;
 and, this true, worth all
 and nothing
 at the same second,
 but meaning
 more than hasty smiles and forced words
 and countless friends of coincidence.
 it lives;
 and in living grows, and growing multiplies.
 such is the life from diversion to delusion ceasing only
 when backward glances end and the past
 is looked through but darkly.

Sports Illustrated

A long wait . . .
 at last the chance.
 The endless practice
 finally sees its use Thoughts no longer focus on the next time and tomorrow . . .
 see only today . . .
 (how slow the tables turn to good,
 the disadvantage great,
 advantage small,
 for the loss the clock moves faster, slower for the win)
 . . . with nothing meaning more,
 last chance to score.

You wonder why there are no crowds, no bands to gaily greet you.
 The empty streets, the barren town do hostilely receive you.
 Of fanfare there exists not much that merits any mention; imagination never pondered such — you're crushed at your reception.
 You learn that to the prodigal son belongs no consolation.
 Your innocence lost, your past friends gone you can never go home again.

Runner-Up

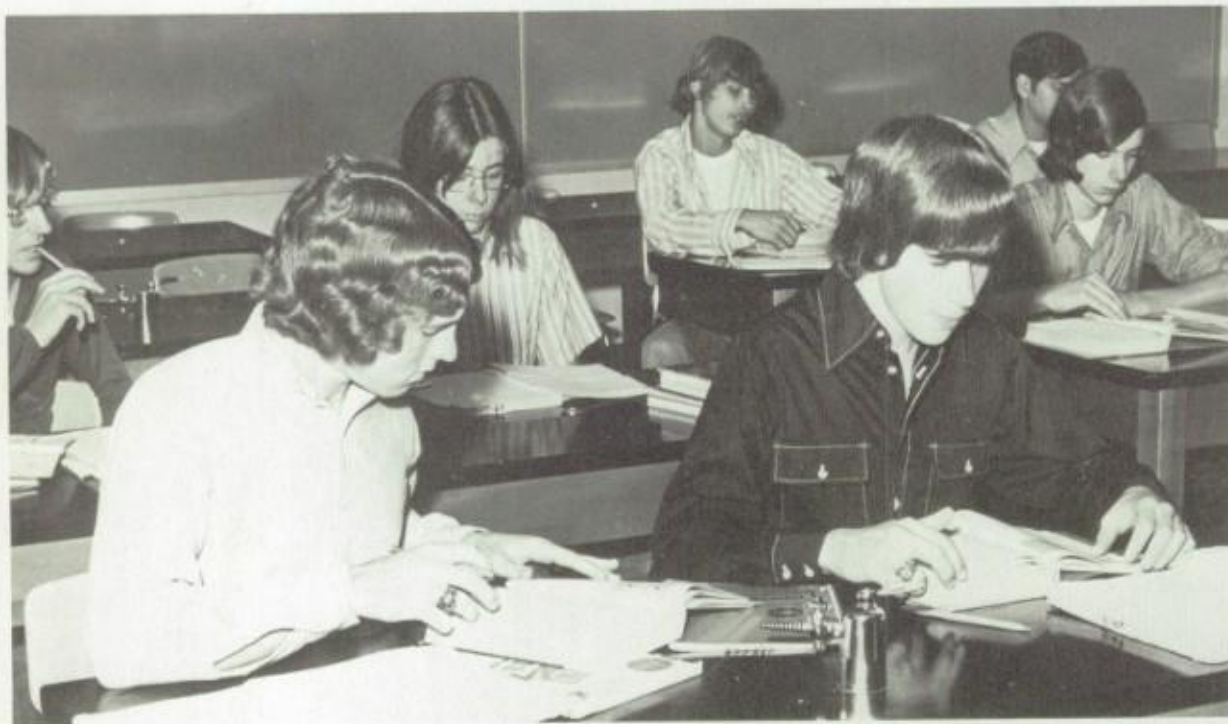

H O M E C O M M I N G

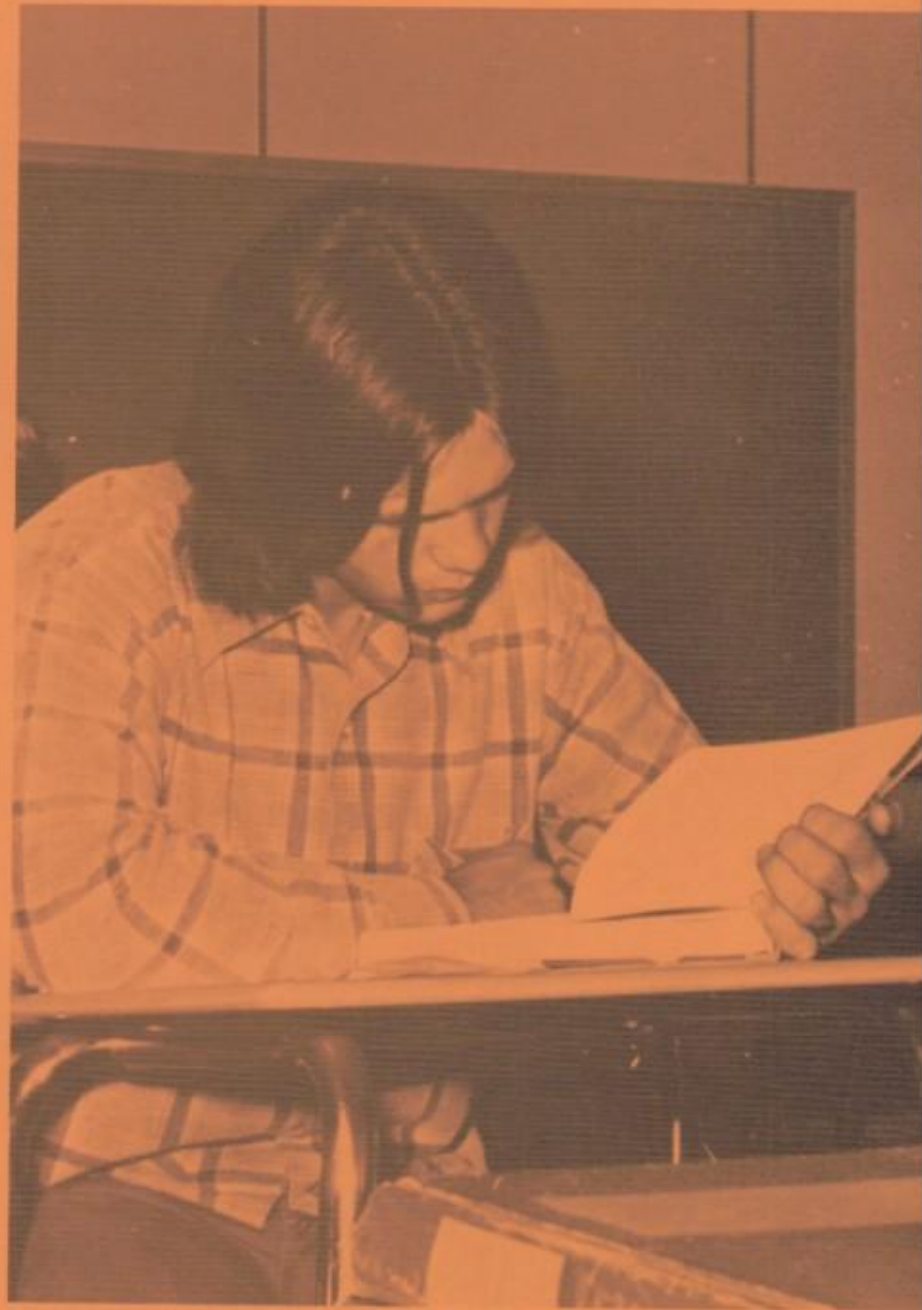

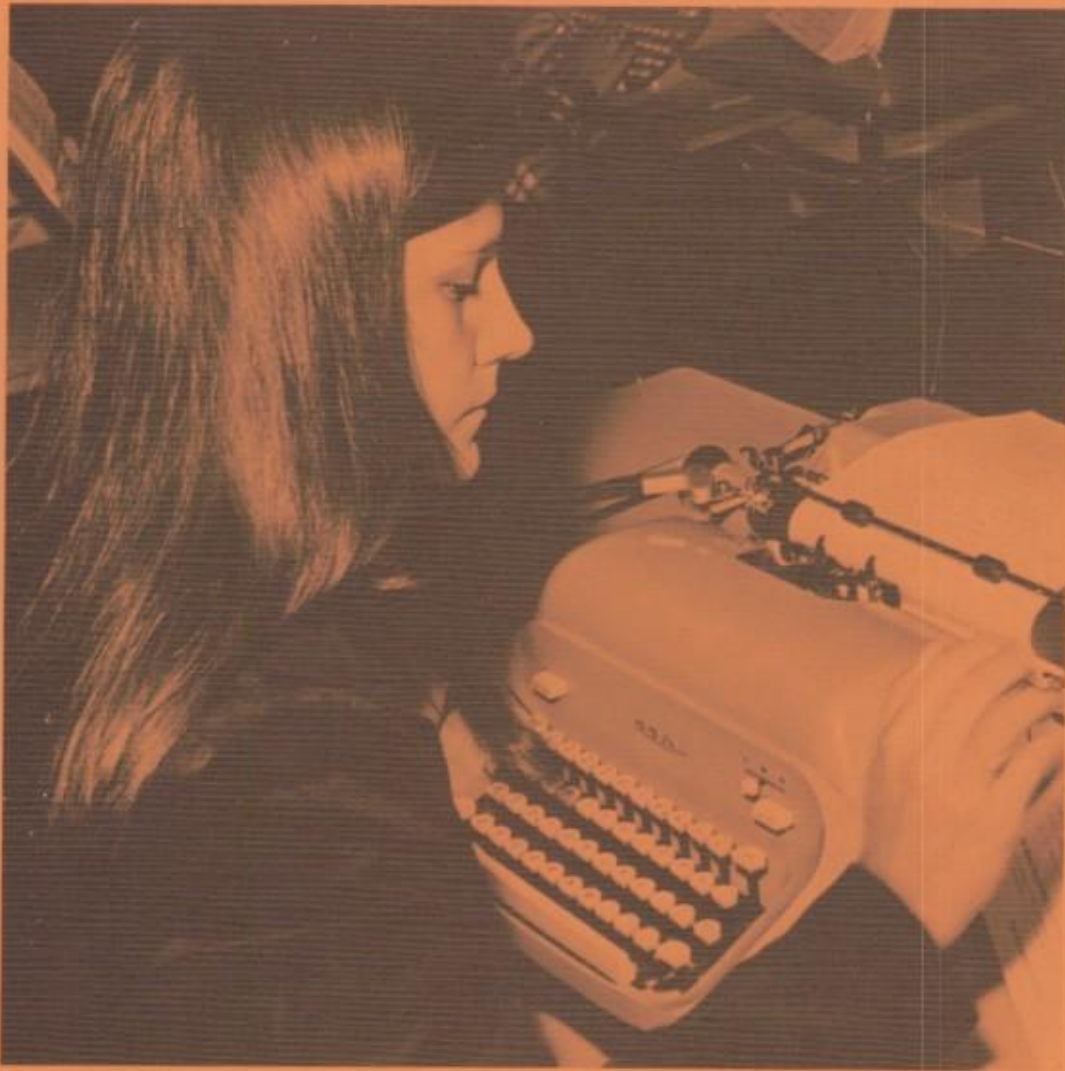

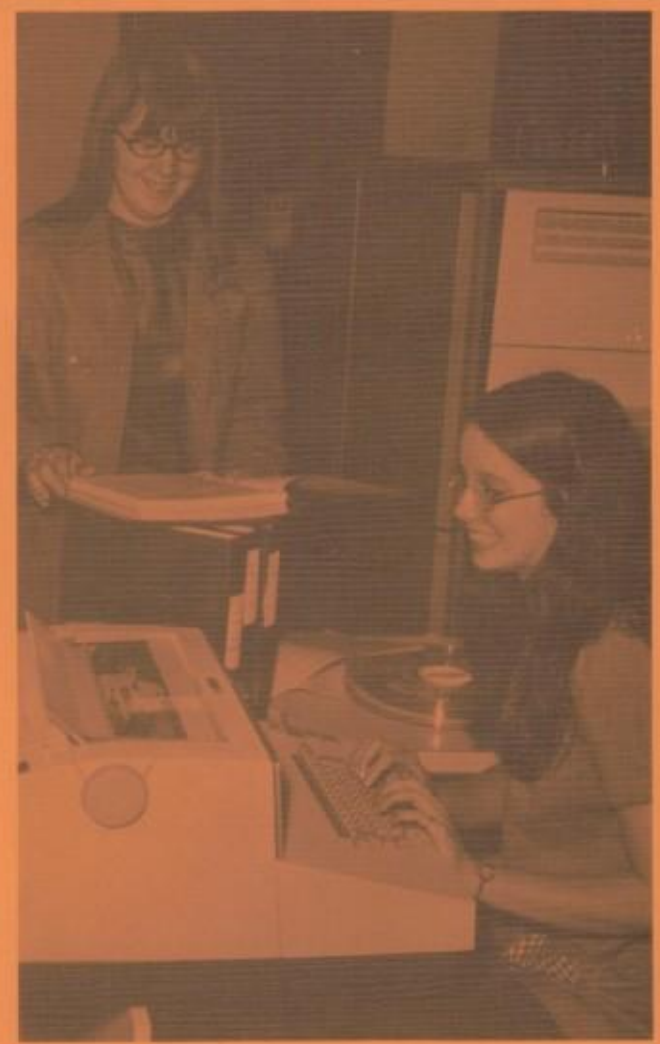

Montour's Homecoming Queen of 1972, Mary Ann Albanesi, was selected from a court of twelve semi-finalists. She and the football king, Jeff Panizzi, were honored at the ceremonies at the Autumn Interlude, this year held at the Flying Carpet Motor Lodge. Music was provided by Contraband. The homecoming queen runner-up was Patty Ross, and the football king runner-up was Dan Hellman.

The House Of Industry

The boy leaves his father's house to live in the house of Industry.
She teaches him the love of handicraft and the responsibility that the wiser matron surrenders demurely.
But most of all, she gives the callow youth his feathers of maturity, and from hence comes the man.

So much paperwork — edicts in our lives . . . why does it have to be so?

An accident of history —
 man meets man.
 They know not each other's tongue, nor manner of habit, nor if the other's hostile . . . or friendly.
 So here they clash, man to man —
 but neither raises a hand.
 They peer into each other's eyes, trying to reveal the beast and foe.
 Yet, they find themselves looking in mirrors. The greater the search for the enemy, the more they sense in each other themselves.
 They find they have shared joys and grief and pain.
 Their common humanity is their bond.
 They are friends.

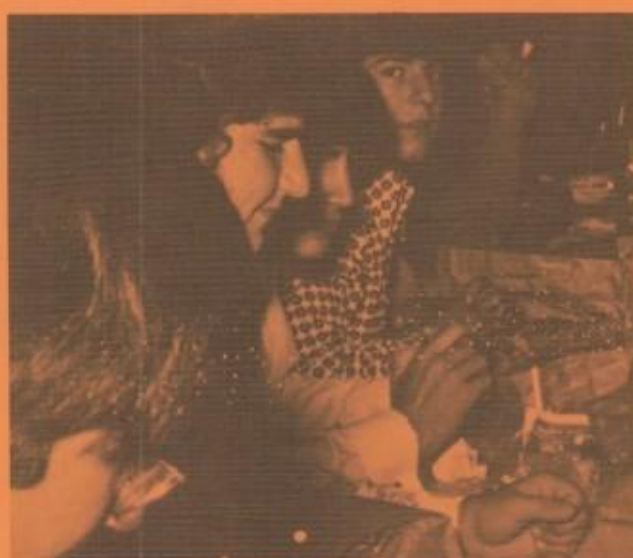

Posma And Pat

This year, Posma Hutasoit is Montour's foreign exchange student. He is from Indonesia, where his father is Minister of Animal Husbandry. He is living here with his American family, the Burns family. We at Montour have enjoyed having him very much and hope that his stay here has been a memorable one.

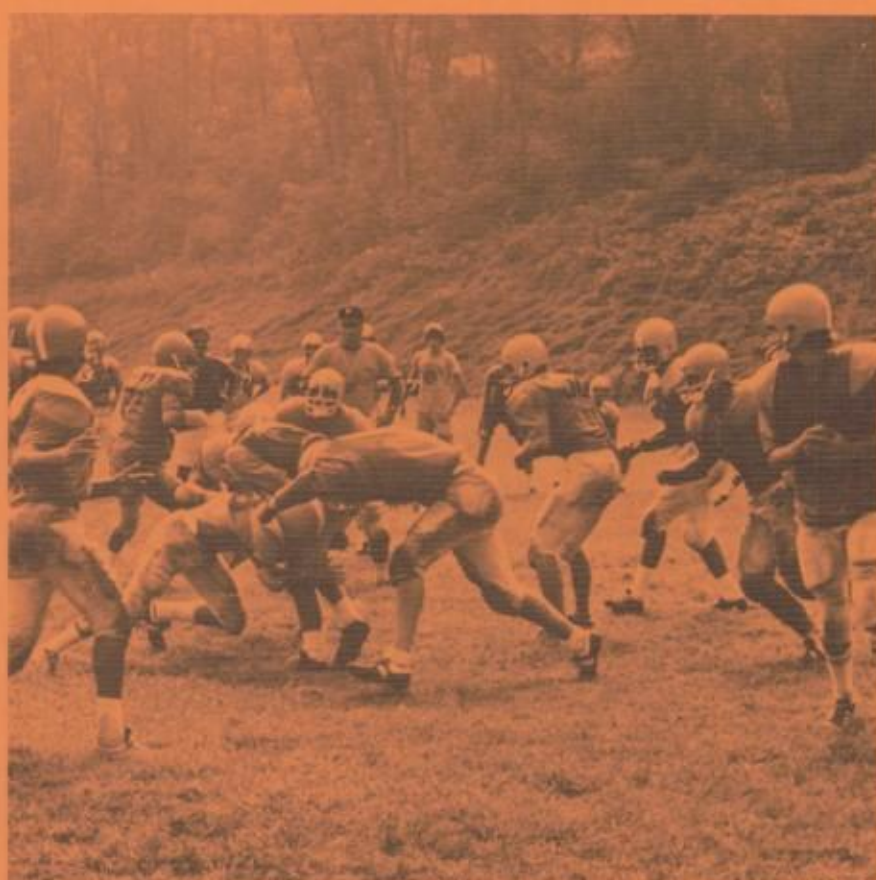

During the past summer Pat Nefos went to the Philippines on the American Abroad program. This experience was, for him, one of great human warmth. It is obvious he returns with a wider knowledge of the world and a deeper understanding of mankind all through it.

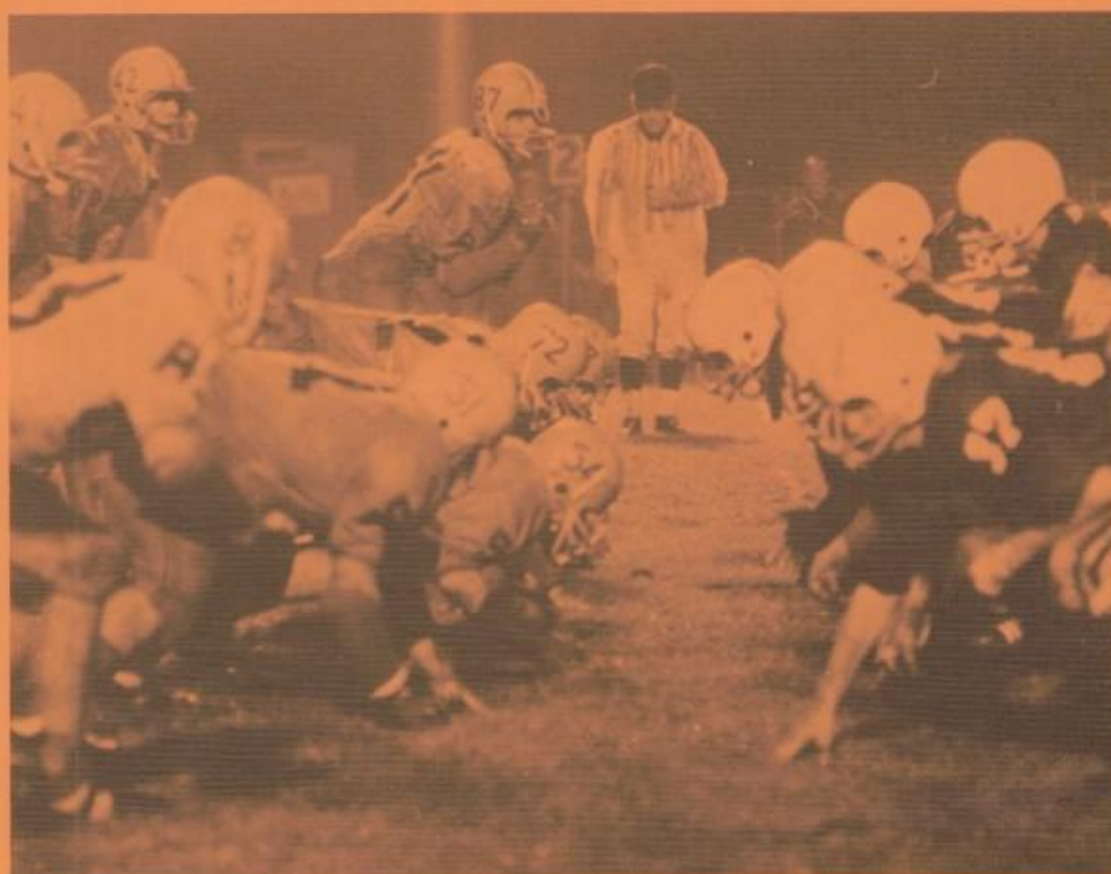

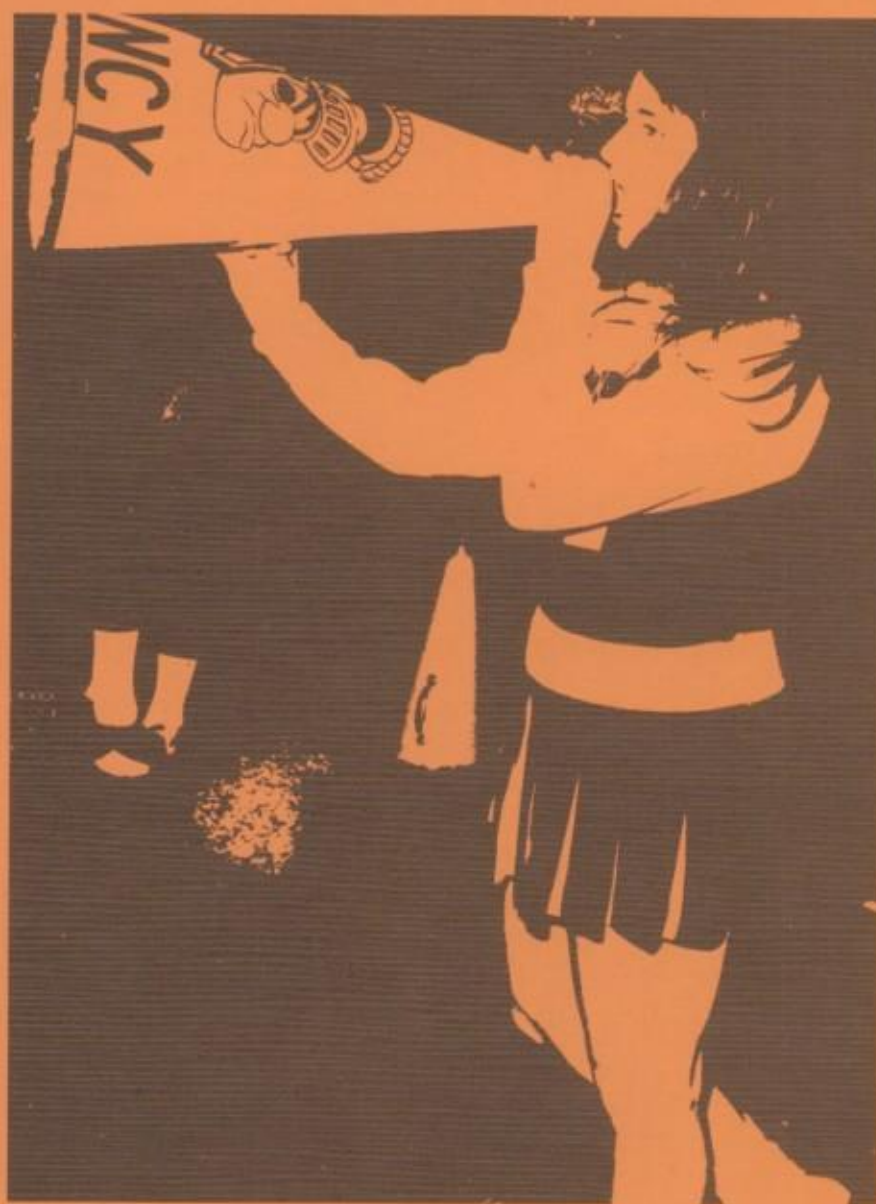

The children innocently
break the locked hands of red rover and kick the can while the bogey lies unsuspecting.
They frolic and gambol,
caring not from whence comes this evening's meal or whether tomorrow brings tragedy and grief.

They are free.

The children innocently
play their merry games.
Their fantasy is reality;
their world is hopes and dreams.
A lost or shattered toy
may make a sullen
face, but little time
will pass before that face glows in the promise of a sunny day.

Aren't we all children?

"This Is Spartan Country"

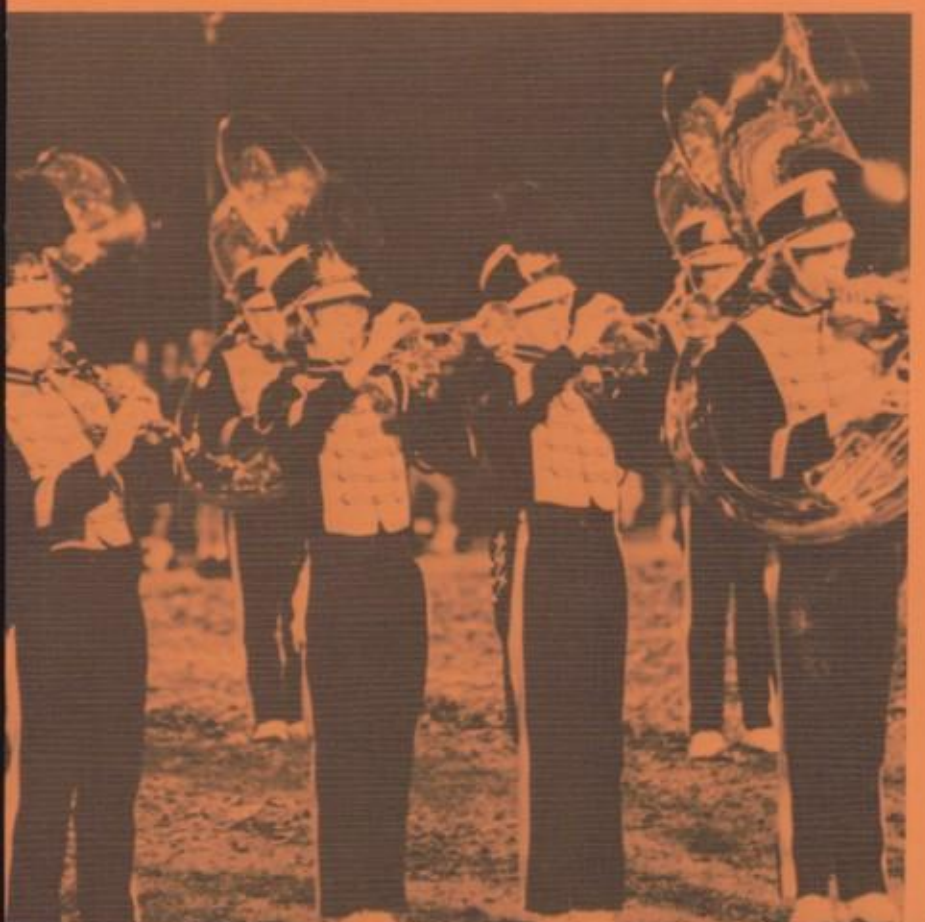

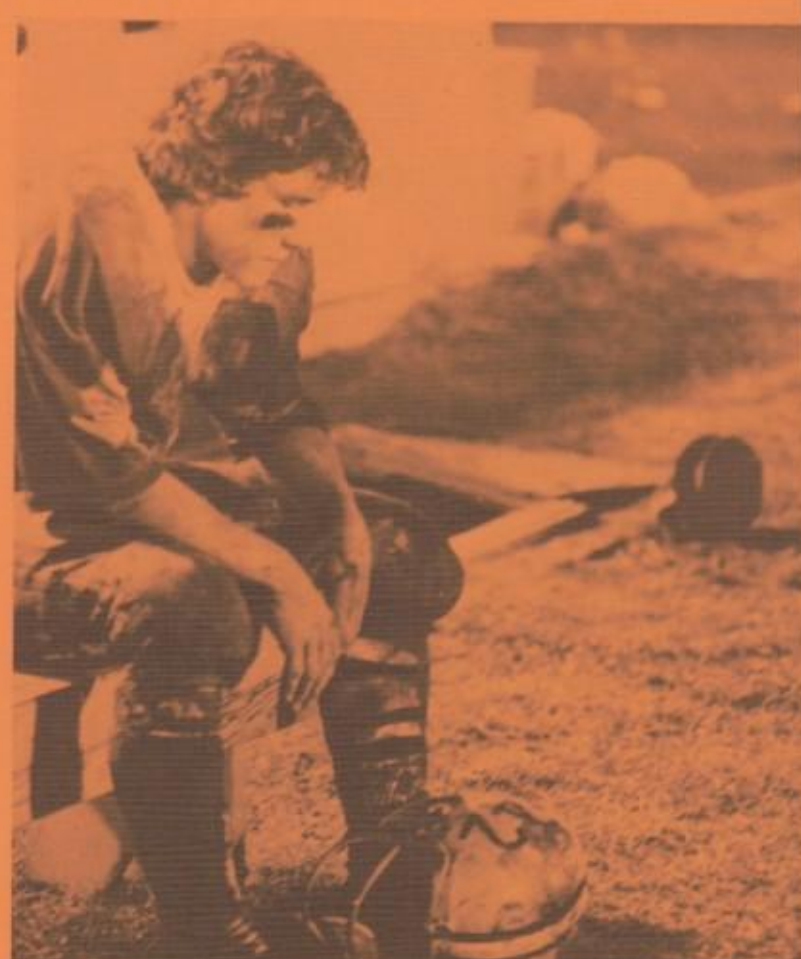

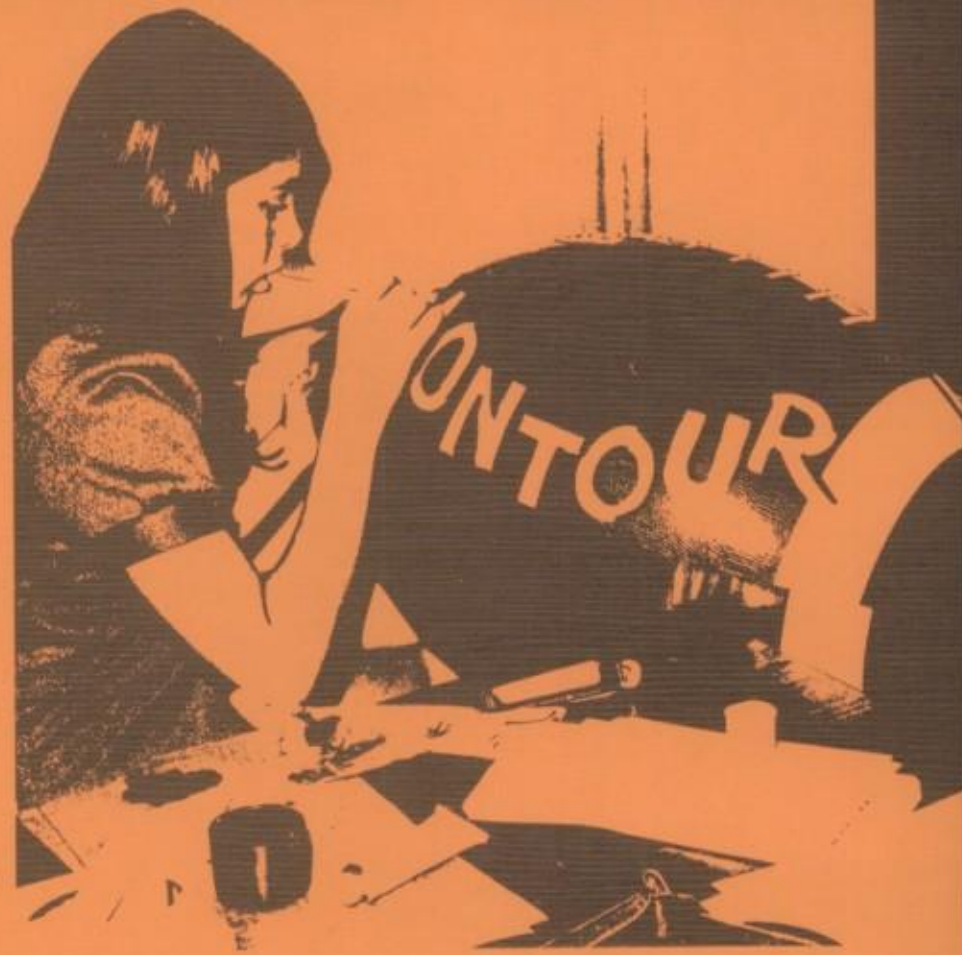

On the hills of Allegheny
'neath the western sky, Proudly stands our dear old high school

On the hilltop high.
Flag we love, black and gold,
Wave aloft for aye,
May we all be leal and loyal,
To thy memory.

When the evening twilight gathers,
And the shadows fall,
Linger long the golden sunbeams,
On the western wall.

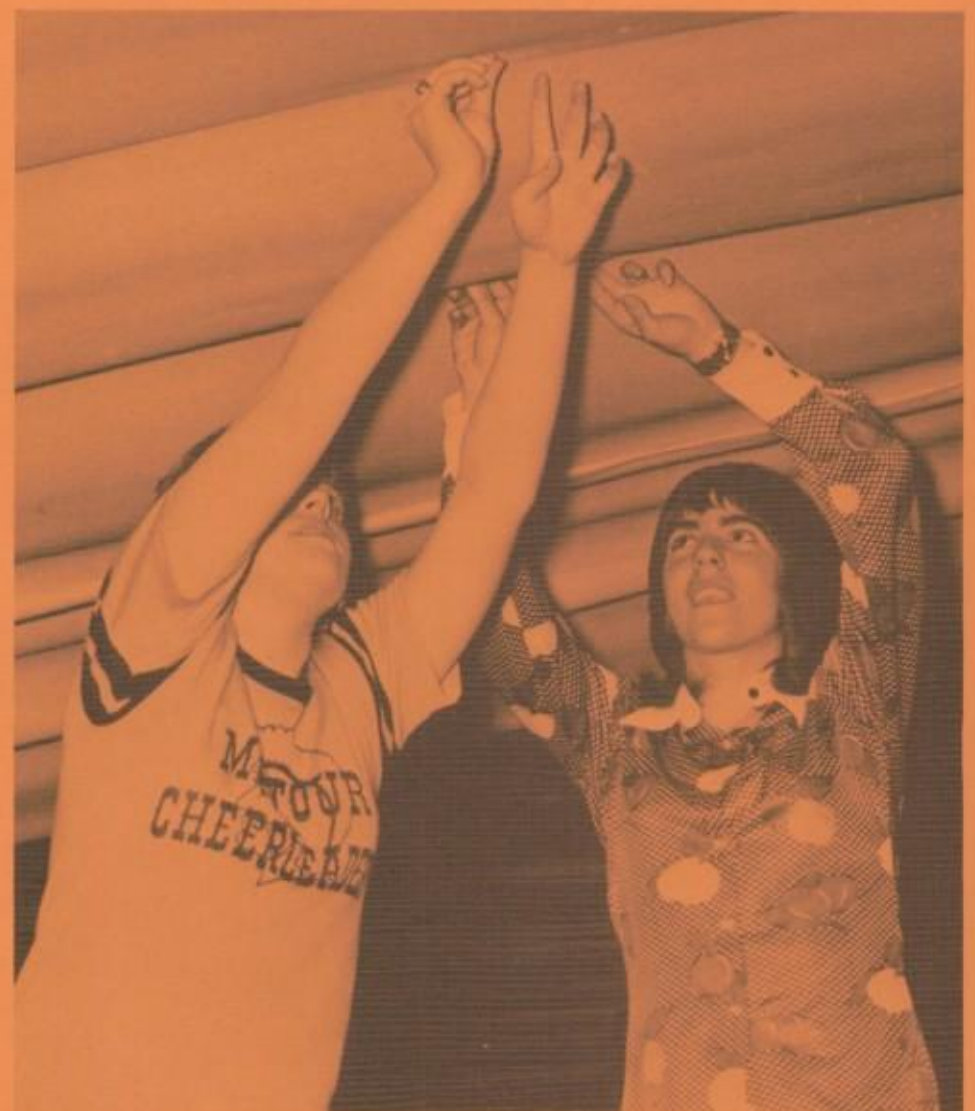

Flag we love, black and gold,
Wave aloft for aye,
May we all be leal and loyal,
To thy memory.

*Orient
At Dawn*

The sun, born of its Pacific womb, tolls the coming of day.
Its clapper pounds the night darkness and breaks it in resounding redness.

Bamboo flutes dart nasally between the frenzied chopping of wooden clappers. Mallets bang drums in hollow syncopation.

The countryside is fleetingly ablaze. The rising alarm bellows its admonition for the stars to flee the holocaust.

Vagrant melodies float aimlessly through bell-chimes. Zithers and cymbals
twang in a musical continuum, never ending, never begun — born of the beauty of tradition.

The sun peals for the glory of the new day.
It does not mourn, does not repent.
It cries out in jubilant celebration.

A gong shimmers, breaking the silence of centuries.

The glowing robes of Justice, the flowing robes, lap her scales and even them or unsettle them, soften them gently or distemper them.

She inundates the temple
in tumultuous praise,
glory from heaven that rolls, swells,
and then ebbs in unwavering constancy.
She undulates across the blue ceiling,
a golden chariot that buoys in the tide, rippling through the clouds, bright banners fluttering around it.

Hair billowing in the breeze,
Justice cautiously prods,
as a man with an unwieldy burden, along the arduous path up the hill.

The sun plays on his beard and,
disappointed, disappears behind the clouds.

This past summer, the Senior Class and the whole student body were stunned and grieved at the death of Bob Martin. The loss of Bob created an unfillable void in life at Montour. He asked not for much, but was always giving. He felt the salt of defeat or letdown, yet never stopped the healing balm of his joviality. He was not a god or object of adulation — only a person. That he lived like a person — prone to human faults and human mortality — should be solace to us and a reminder that we ourselves should live impassionedly, for death may soon call us all too soon.

Already old, the question Who shall die?
 Becomes unspoken Who is innocent?
 For death in war is done by hands;
 Suicide has cause and stillbirth logic.
 But this invites the occult mind,
 Cancels our physics with a sneer,
 And spatters all we knew of denouement
 Across the expedient and wicked stones.

a melting icicle,
our high school days —
both were once beautiful, but soon they will be gone forever.

The die teeters between two numbers, unable to choose which one.
 Its short fall takes with it, in crushing sighs the hopes and fortunes of a man.
 But he goes on, playing his silly games, thinking that things might get better if he did, instead of stopping.
 So we go on with our silly games, assuming we can bail out when we have to.
 But before we can change it,
 the die is cast.

*see, really nice
 to a really nice
 give a met. in Geometry and walk. We'll have a great time an year fun look next year, and be this summer, and be good God bless ya too.
 Luv,
 Sharon

The countless thousand things that need be done
Or those complete that need their strings untied,
A process that goes on from year to year,
Being partially buried
never dies.
What once was wrong
now stands unquestioned, right;
And right, since then decayed,
are prison bars.
Swirling ambitions that once flew out of sight now plummet to the ground — icy facades.

CHEERLEADING . . .
looking at a crowd of 1,000 people and remembering to smile. Each girl has given up her individuality to become one of the group. She loses herself in her thoughts and actions as she cheers for her team whether it be through victory or defeat.

Though banners seem too quick to fade and pyramids crumble with defeat and screams turn finally to voiceless crowds, one last fact remains unchanged:
"Can't beat Johnson."

A thousand horns grow hushed;
 a thousand strings pause in their tuning to look up;
 scores of timpani and cymbals and bells quickly muffle themselves in reverent obeisance.
 With the lift of a finger, what had been a cacaphony turned silence
 blossoms into a booming, pulsating flux of intertwining melodies.
 From nothing flourishes
 a lusty stalk soaring skyward.
 The maestro has come.

The Sound of Silence

Montour's Band Queen of 1972 is Martha Steele. She was elected by the other band members for her sparkingly unique personality. The band has certainly chosen for itself a worthy representative.

And the Beat Goes on . . .

The melody of life floats gently,
finding then caressing
searching ears
and whispering to move to right or left.
But one who dares a different harmony
soon is found to be outside the line
guilty of the most unpardonable sins
of being out of place and out of step.

A large, light-colored balloon with the letters "FS" printed on it, suspended by ropes. Several young women are sitting on the ground in front of the balloon, looking up at it. The scene is outdoors at night, with a dark background and some lights visible in the distance.

What is it that startles you so from your slumber? You poke your head up — a tortoise straining its neck above its pillow shell, a conch of dreamy, embalmed speculation. You are wrapped and cushioned by sleep immortalized, against the cold waking of reality. Dispel the ghosts of your mortal anxieties and concerns. Your time here is but halfway spent.
Withdraw once more into my too quickly morning.

A western wind blows
 turning the leaves.
 And one by one
 their secrets they unfold Of strangers, idiots, and of mice and men.
 They refuse to shout the meaning;
 the answers must be sought
 And bought with treasured time.
 But none have time.
 So the western wind dies.
 The leaves lie still.
 And no one knows the secret,
 no one cares.

Monitor Staff Making News

Wendy Steele has been active as Editor of the MONITOR for the past two years. A creative writing student, Wendy plans to go to nursing school following graduation.

Senior Karen Metro is on the Editorial Staff and plans to attend Shadyside Hospital Nursing School.

A member of the MONITOR for the past two years, Cindy Gray has acted as typist during '72-'73. She plans to continue secretarial training.

Roseanna Suter is a MONITOR typist and plans to attend the Bradford Business School in Pittsburgh.

A typist for the past two years, Debbie Prescott plans to obtain a secretarial job following graduation.

Ron Smedley has been a MONITOR photographer for the past school year and hopes to go into the field of computer programming.

Mirror Editor Reports Progress

Yearbook editor Marybeth Baker recently reported that work on this year's book has already begun. During the first week of school, money was collected from ads sold by MIRROR staff members over the summer.

Marybeth, a senior, resides in Robinson Township along with five sisters and two brothers. She has been a member of the MIRROR staff for the past two years, and participated on the MONITOR staff in her sophomore year.

In addition to her active role as yearbook editor, Marybeth also finds time for the volleyball team and piano.

Her future plans include college and a career in physical therapy or special education.

 class of Frank 45*

A chord floated into a window
 And struck a man
 As he dozed on the couch.
 The man, being awakened,
 Picked up the chord
 And throwing it over his shoulder,
 Lugged it next door to he who had first produced it
 And slugged him with it.
 Does music tame the wild beast?

Men in their prime play
a short interlude between age and youth, hesitating only momentarily on the journey, hopefully to catch a glimpse of life.

JUNIOR CLASS OFFICERS

A black silk sheet covers the city.
 As their halos begin to fade Neon lights talk in bumblebee voices of what is for sale and their price.
 They flash hello to every stranger and offer the jewel they've locked inside In a moment they'll drop 5th Avenue and return to their 6th Street lives.
 They take their trade to the alleys or wherever business is found, Speaking of love and money in deep red seething sounds And so they live from night to night and sing a wordless song.

A purifying flame beams, burns the hell out of the sky.

Money — Money — Money

H A L L S

That tiny cubby-hole, transformed into a Pandora's Box, locks away our treasured belongings which are blurred
into an organized chaos and nestled throughout the year.

Combine a dash of knowledge with a bit of curiosity, add a little luck
 stirring continually over the fire of ambition which is sparked by eagerness and balanced with understanding End result . . . one successful student.

Seated amid scattered books and papers, we seek answers to ease our perplexed minds, thirsting for the knowledge, we drink in the facts, and absorb the ideas.
 Stirred by our thoughts and motivated by our goals, we strive to achieve through those fifty odd minutes that blend into the school day.

Eat, Drink, and Be Merry

Though days may end and suns may set,

there dawns a new horizon.
Gazing beyond the sinking sun,
we envision worlds
of butterflies and daisies.
Our wide-eyed youth carries us skipping
through sunshine fields, as we trip upon the memories in the caverns of our mind.

Worlds to conquer,
mountains to climb,
we trudge toward that golden dream dawning in our soul.
A step at a time —
pausing a moment —
to catch our breath
and mold in our memory
the sun-drenched days,
the warm, glowing thoughts of yesterday.

Remember our sunsets,
our vibrant smiles
of days gone by,
and set your vision
toward the new horizon
that beckons us forward . . .

He came through the clothesline maze of childhood in basketball shoes.
 Up from the cracked cement of sidewalks.
 Dark hair blowing in the breeze
 Smiling his unique smile.
 He left
 Knowing love better than long division.

Life is like a complex puzzle, each piece necessary to the finished picture. Our picture will never be complete, for early one Saturday morning in November a piece was lost. When Bill Nowak died, he took that piece with him. The empty space can only be filled with memories that we have of him.

. . . Memories of his smile, his outgoing personality, his fervent love of sports; memories of a boy who lived life so enthusiastically but never had the chance to become a man . . .
 memories of Bill.

The wild and screaming throngs have lost their massive voice.
Scores lie deep in puddles of the mind — cheers or tears it matters not.
Dried confetti dreams now only sigh, vacant bleachers' splinter forests grow.
only fallen leaves are seen to score by hungry birds not caring for the sight.

The wind, alone, is left to wonder why and quietly to question "Lost or Won?"

In 1972, the Montour Spartans were W.P.I.A.L. baseball champs. The championship game was played at Three Rivers Stadium against Penn Hills. Montour tied the game, 1-1 in their half of the seventh inning and went on to win in the twelfth by the score 3-2.

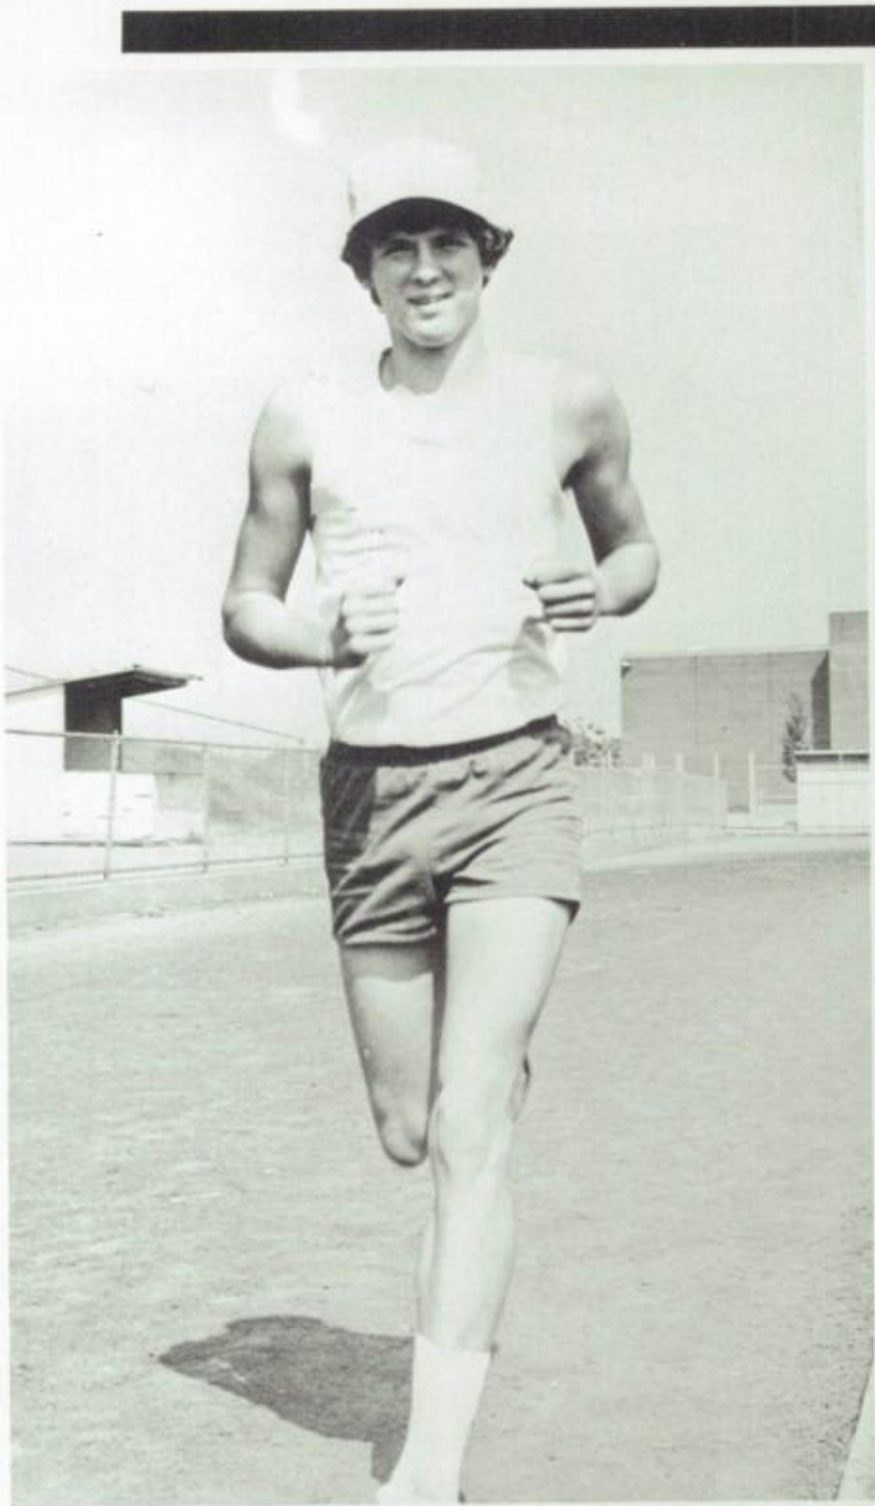

The Championship was the first in the 22 years of coaching for Mr. Birko. We would like to congratulate Mr. Birko, the other coaches, and above all the team on a superb victory.

Swingers Win Section 7

The Lord is my caddy, I shall not slice;
He maketh me to shoot down straight fairways
He leadeth me over water traps;
he restoreth my ball.
He leadeth me in the paths of par
for his name's sake.
Yea though I walk through the valley of the sand traps,
I fear no bogey;
for thou art with me;
thy irons and woods, they comfort me.
Thou preparest the clubhouse before me in the presence of my foursome;
my beer mug runneth over.
Surely birdies and eagles shall follow me
all the days of my life, and I shall dwell in the house of Palmer
forever.

The Mermaids

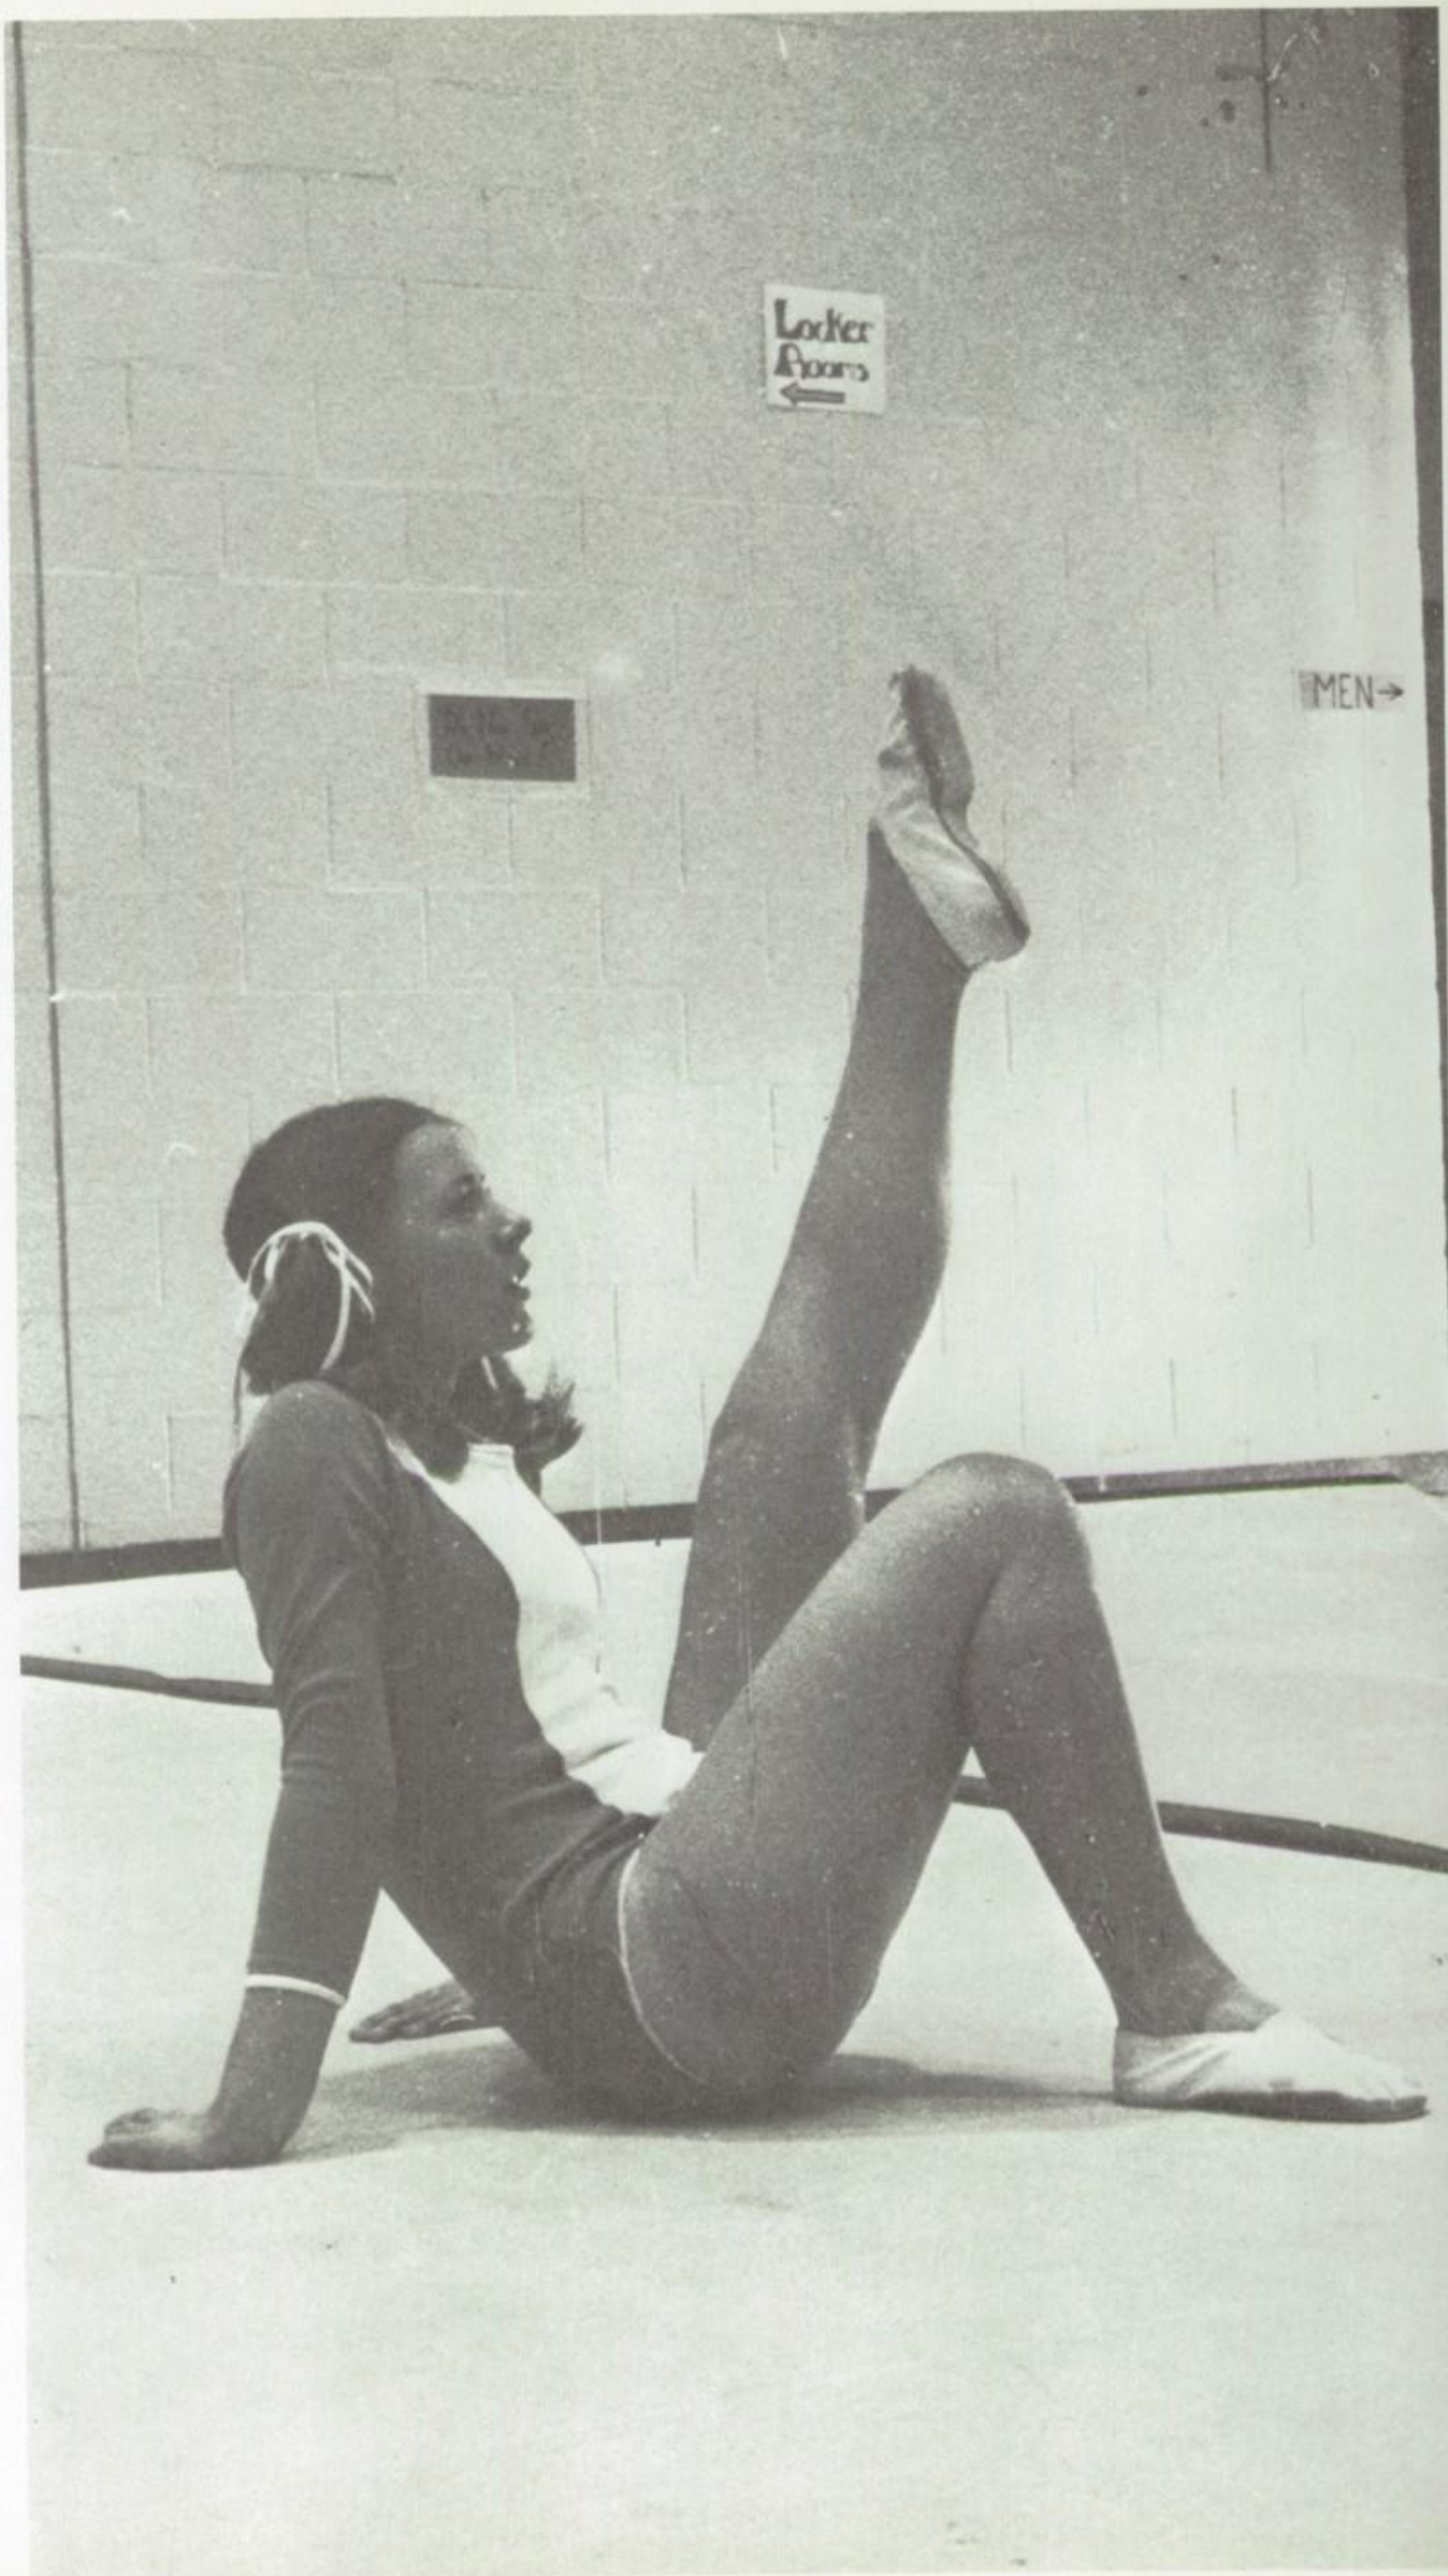

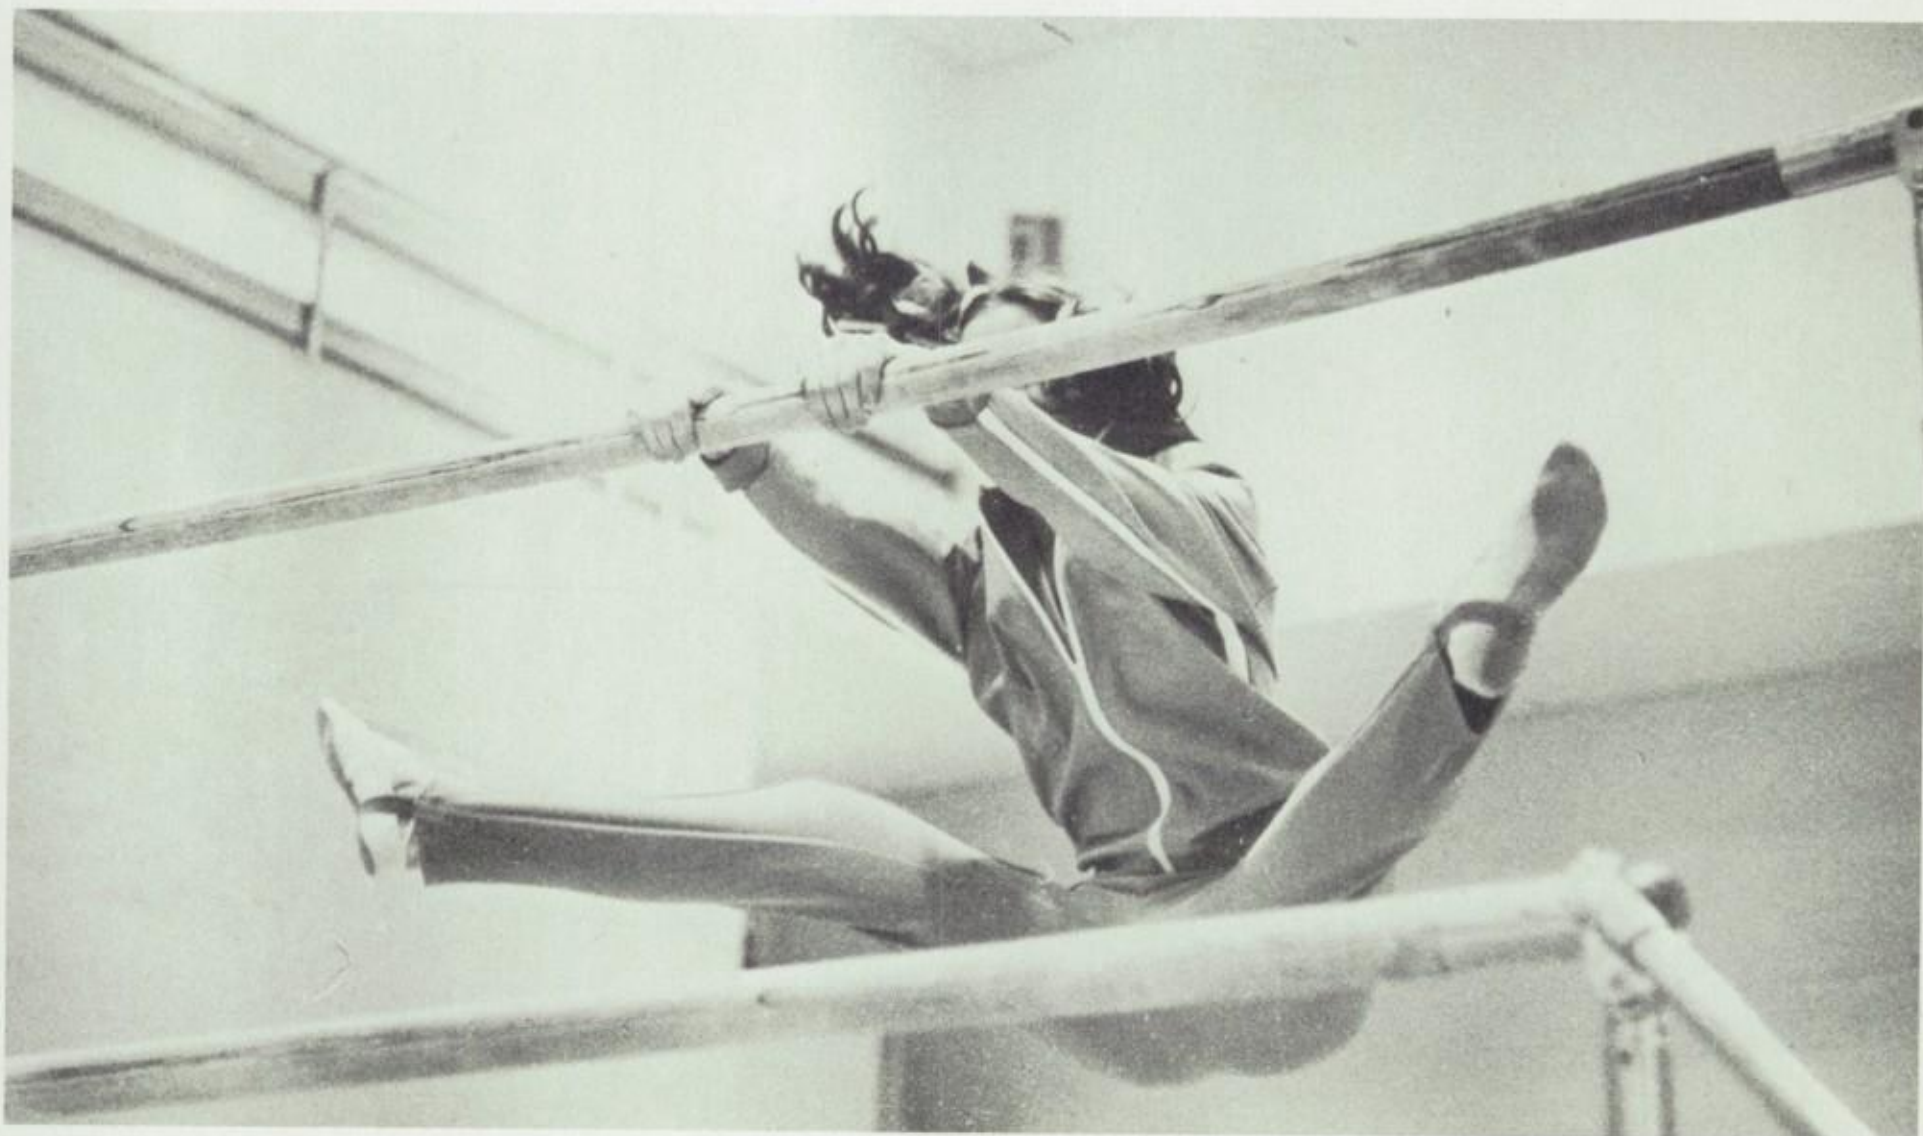

1972 saw the start of a girls' swim team at Montour. Although they did not bring a championship to our school, their hard work and determination showed the traditional Montour Spirit. In future years we can be assured that the girls' swim team will rank high among our girls' athletic teams.

Fickle youth flicker indecisively.
And before a favorable wind
Can blow from the desired quarter,
The flame is snuffed.

Re,

Well, here we are, almost jrs. and I can't believe it. It's been super knowing you and next year, we'll have a ball! You & I are really neat friends and I appreciate you. You seem to be there when I need you most.

Love always,
Christy

Sweet silent memories
singing softly in our thoughts
as we walk along together, with our personalities blended as perfectly as colorful autumn leaves . . .
a kaleidoscope of happiness. Our cascading fantasies are becoming as real as the trampled leaves beneath our feet . . .

My life has been a tapestry of rich and royal hue,
An everlasting vision
of an everchanging view.

A wondrous woven magic
in bits of black and gold,
A tapestry to feel and see,
impossible to hold . . .

Acknowledgements

There have been many people in the production of this book to whom we, the Mirror staff, are indebted. So as not to pass these people over, as is often the case, and not to appear ungrateful for their services, we would here like to extend our most sincere thanks. For us it has been quite a rewarding year, and we hope that the persons previously mentioned and also those featured in this book may share with us, if even in some small way, the little bit of beauty we have tried to capture here.

Special thanks also go to the Chicago Tribune — New York News Syndicate, Inc. for the comic strip character Broom-Hilda, Newspaper Enterprise Association, Inc. for the use of the Born Loser strip, and King Features for the use of the Tumbleweeds and Tiger cartoon characters, Ray Wilson and Wayne Honath for the teacher caricatures, and to Mr. Ted Cataldi, Sr. and Parkway Studios for their cooperation and assistance.

You've overslept your time.
The night has been exhausted in its wait and can remain no longer, and already you should be leaving.
You hem and haw, in order to forego
the inevitable departure.
Your hesitation is born of the reluctance to leave the warm sheets of the mind, the security and fondness of the past.
But if you stay here,
your journey will go unsatisfied.
Is there nobility in forsaking your godly cause all for the want of a craven bedsheet refuge?
Lo, a new and glorious day beckons you, O Traveler.
Leave now and take with you the undulled determination of your calling.
Go with the promise of this day;
go with greatness.

Sue,
To a good friend
who has suffered through me in all those exciting classes. Don't forget the good times we've had & I hope we have more to come.

I wish you
all the best
